In mid-April 1953, source determined that the former airfield and seaplane base at Bug on Ruegen Island was demolished and, therefore, unserviceable. A driver stated that the debris was trucked to Lietzow railroad station where garages were to be built. Allegedly, the field was to be reconditioned after clearing work.

Comment. Since 1950, there have been contradictory rumors on reconstruction work at Bug airfield. According to repeated press reports, the field is intended to be reoccupied. The present report which is the first information since May 1950 indicates that the field is destroyed and unoccupied. It is believed probable that the field will be reconstructed in connection with construction work on the other projects on Ruegen Island.
